School council updates

The purpose of this update is to tell everyone in our school what we have been up to in school council. We hope you enjoy reading our news.

Our first meeting was exciting, happy and some of us were nervous about what our new roles were going to involve. We were all ecstatic that we were voted by our classes.

Each school councilor reports the findings of every meeting back to their class. School council also tries to involve their classmates by doing class votes.

We had a school council meeting about reflectors and we decided to sell them again. Reflectors are important because they help cars see you when it is dark. If you ride a bike or a scooter, a reflector will give vehicles a warning to slow down.

First of all, we asked our classes which reflectors were their favorites and they voted. The most popular reflectors were a new plushy monster design. There were also stars, multi-colored animals and badges.

School council also did an assembly about it to raise awareness and encourage people to buy them. We went round to every class and sold the reflectors. School council would like to thank the people who bought them.

After half term, the school councilor's next job was to sell the poppies for remembrance. The Royal British Legion delivered a variety of different poppy designs. Thank you to everyone that bought a poppy we raised lots of money!

Mrs Ellwood asked school council to create a garden box design to label a garden box for every class. The garden boxes will be in the garden by the Starry Night artwork. Each class will be responsible for planting and caring for their plants.

Izzy Parr and Eliza Bohn won the competition that would decide which design would be showcased on the garden boxes.

In key stage 2 school council found out that many children were not getting their first choice of dessert. School council decided to speak to Hayley (head chef) to see if she could rotate the desserts so it was fair for both the younger and older students.

Thank you for reading our news and we look forward to next term of being school councilors.
